A Word from Chief Coordinator and Commander in Chief

To: The Masses of our democratic revolutionary movement,

I address you today with a heart full of gratitude and pride for your unwavering dedication to the cause of democracy and liberation in Rwanda. It is an honour to stand at the helm of the Rwanda National Congress (RNC) and lead this mass democratic movement towards a brighter future for our beloved country.

I want to express my deepest appreciation for your courage, resilience, and unity in the face of immense challenges. Together, we have embarked on a journey that seeks to liberate Rwanda from the oppressive regime of Paul Kagame through peaceful and democratic means. Our shared vision of a free, just, and inclusive Rwanda is what drives us forward, even in the face of adversity.

Our relentless pursuit of democratic means to liberate Rwanda is commendable. It is through the power of democracy, driven by the collective will of the people, that real change can be brought about. I firmly believe that every individual should have the right to express themselves freely, participate in peaceful protests, and engage in open and fair elections that reflect the true aspirations of the Rwandan people.

The path ahead is not an easy one, and we must brace ourselves for the obstacles that lie in our way. Our struggle for democracy is not a singular battle it is a collective effort that necessitates the involvement of every Rwandan who dreams of a better future. Our commitment to this cause gives strength to all those who yearn for change and inspires hope in the hearts of our people.

As we move forward, let us remember the values that bind us together: peace, justice, and equality. We cannot achieve true liberation by stooping to the same oppressive tactics used against us. Our revolutionary movement must be grounded in non-violence, respecting the inherent worth and dignity of every individual. Only then can we build a Rwanda that is truly inclusive and unified.

Education and awareness play a crucial role in our struggle for liberation. The more we educate ourselves and others about the principles of democracy, human rights, and social justice, the stronger our movement becomes. Let us engage with our fellow citizens, empowering them with knowledge and encouraging them to take an active role in shaping the future of our nation.

Remember that our fight extends beyond the borders of Rwanda. Let us reach out to international partners who share our commitment to democratic values and seek their support in amplifying our voices. By forging alliances and building bridges, we enhance our collective strength and increase our chances of success.

I want to assure you that the Rwanda National Congress is fully dedicated to your aspirations and working tirelessly to bring about the change we so desire. Together, we will continue to advocate for democratic principles, the rule of law, and the protection of the rights and freedoms of all Rwandans. Your voices matter, and we will ensure they are heard.

Lastly, I urge you to prioritize human rights, social justice, and equality in our struggle. A liberated Rwanda should be built on the principles of inclusivity and respect for all individuals, regardless of their ethnic, religious, or political backgrounds. A society that upholds these values will be better equipped to move forward, heal past wounds, and build a prosperous future that our country so desperately needs.

I am proud to stand among such a brave and resilient group of individuals. Together, let us create a Rwanda that we can be proud of a Rwanda that upholds the values we hold dear. I remain committed to leading this Mass democratic revolutionary movement towards a brighter future for our nation.

In unity, Solidarity and determination,
